

The Demise of the American Stonehenge: A Sirius Affair

by S.K. Bain

What?, you may be thinking. You don't blog for half a year, and suddenly, two posts in three days?
Yes, and for good reason...

Dateline: July 6th, 2022 - Many are cheering the partial destruction of the Georgia Guidestones this morning, and their subsequent demolition later in the day. However, you may want to hold off on celebrating just yet.

A Hidden Hand

The Georgia Guidestones have long been associated in the public mind with the New World Order, due to the content of the inscriptions on the stones. I'm not going to repeat here what have been called "the Ten Commandments of the Antichrist"—they're not that bad—but they have served as fodder for conspiracy theories for decades.

The guidestones were unveiled/dedicated on March 22, 1980. March 22, 3/22 — 322 is Yale Secret Society Skull & Bones' special number. They were located on Georgia State Route 77, erected on the Double 7 Farm. I've previously explained the significance of the number 77 in the dark arts, and the Cryptocracy's penchant for orchestrating events along roadways bearing that number: Dealey Plaza, Oklahoma City and Waco, Texas are all located along U.S. Route 77.

There is good evidence of the involvement of Freemasons and/or Rosicrucians in the design and construction of the guidestones—I'm not going to detail that evidence here. (If you've been following my work for any length of time and you don't by now trust that I do my homework, you probably shouldn't be reading this.) Here's a good article on the subject. I don't agree with all of the author's conclusions, but overall it's very informative: "The 'Hidden Hand' Behind Georgia's Guidestones" <https://theobservermagazine.substack.com/p/the-hidden-hand-behind-georgias-guidestones>

I'll mention a few items, though: the granite specified for the construction of the monument was "Pyramid Blue" granite, which was mined at the nearby Pyramid Quarry. If you're not familiar with the Freemasonic obsession with all things Egypt, read up on it.

Happy Birthday, Mr. President?

July 6th is the birthday of President George W. Bush, one of Skull & Bones most famous members (along with his father, George H.W. "Poppy" Bush—their Bones nicknames were Gog and Magog). As detailed in my second book Most Dangerous: A True Story, on this day in 2013, the Cryptocracy engineered these two events in celebration of this occasion (both descriptions from Wikipedia):

- A Boeing 777 operating as Asiana Airlines Flight 214 crashes at San Francisco International Airport, killing three and injuring 181 of the 307 people on board.
- A 73-car oil train derailed in the town of Lac-Mégantic, Quebec and explodes into flames, killing at least 47 people and destroying more than 30 buildings in the town's central area.

So the Georgia Guidestones were unveiled and dedicated on 3.22, and blown up on the birthday of one of the most famous Bonesmen, G.W. Bush. So it was also a Skull & Bones affair rather than strictly Freemasonic or Rosicrucian? They built the guidestones and then blew them up 42 years later for kicks?

Actually, who cares? That's enough evidence to convict. Good riddance to the damn things, regardless of who built them or blew them up. We've got enough else to worry about. Let's move on.

The End

I really wish that this was the end of the story and that we could move on, but it's not and we can't. I suspect that there's something far more concerning going on here.

In my blog post this Tuesday, I discussed July 4th as the observed date of the conjunction of Sirius, the Blazing Star of the Freemasons, with the sun (conjunction can occur anywhere from the 4th to the 6th depending on the year)—the real reason for selection of this day by the Founders as "Independence Day". This year, in 2022, the actual conjunction is today, July 6th.

It is a well-known fact that the Georgia Guidestones were constructed in part as a clock, with multiple purposeful orientations to heavenly bodies. It is a clock with specific astronomical alignments, which does not necessarily make it an "astronomical clock", but it is in fact that, as well.

Dedicated in 1980, the “American Stonehenge” marked the year 25,600 (see my blog entry from July 4th for more on this topic). In 1980, there were exactly 41 years left to The End of the Old Great Age in 2021. I have written extensively about the number 25,641—the Illuminati SuperNumber—and its use by the Global Elite as the precise length of the Great Age. I’ll not repeat myself on that matter here, except to say that it doesn’t matter how long the Great Age actually is, it’s how long they say it is that really matters.

The erection of the Georgia Guidestones initiated a Final Countdown to the terminal year of the Dying Great Age, to THE END (which, coincidentally, is the name of my fourth book, published by TrineDay).

A Very Sirius Matter

For those of you not familiar with my work and who’ve actually kept reading to this point, you probably formed the impression early into this piece that I’m a number-tard, and now you’re completely convinced of it. I’m aware that this may appear to be the case, but I’m just reporting what I’ve uncovered. I didn’t make this crap up.

But the bottom line is that all the numbers add up and, more importantly, correspond to real world events—and here’s my assessment of the situation:

1. The Georgia Guidestones were constructed by the Cryptocracy as an obligatory warning to humanity. It’s well established that their value system, if you can call it that, requires them to issue advance notice of their intended actions, even if no one actually picks up on or understands their messages, which are often cryptic.
2. The guidestones were an astronomical timepiece, and the Cryptocracy just blew up the clock. The guidestones were a warning, and they just stopped the clock and announced the end of the warning period. This has occurred smack dab in the middle of Year Zero. Time has run out, quite literally by their reckoning, and that’s not going to be good for any of us common folk.

But wait a minute, you might say, if the clock expired in 2021, if that was the end of the Great Age, why did they wait a full year to dispose of it? In context of a cycle of time roughly 26,000 years in duration, a year is but a millisecond. They chose to wait and wipe the timepiece of their construction off the map on the day of their choosing—on a day dedicated to Sirius. As I’ve explained previously, including in my last article, the Global Elite may time some of their deeds to the sun and moon other celestial bodies, and pay lip service to them, but they worship—and are obsessed with—the Dog Star, the mythical Abode of Lucifer.

The Cycle of Precession that determines the length of the Great Age is marked by the sun’s passage through the signs of the Zodiac, but it is merely the most visible of our local celestial actors upon the cosmic stage. The true star of the show is Sirius.

The return of Sirius to mid-heaven at midnight marks the start of our current New Year. September 11th is the observed date of Sirius’ first helical rising and the start of the Egyptian-Coptic calendar—Happy New Year, again! (The actual date of this occurrence has moved backwards on the calendar over the centuries due to precession and now occurs in July and August, depending on your latitude.)

Thus, the alarm clock sounded its last warning on July 6th, 2022, the first Grand Conjunction in the New Great Age (of Lucifer) between our local star and the Dog Star, our sun and the Secret Sun, which is to the Elite the True Source of Life, the home of the Light Bearer.

So you might wanna think twice before celebrating the demolition of the Georgia Guidestones.

Postscript: A Few Loose Ends

First, I am aware that Kandiss Taylor, whose parents were apparently didn't care for the traditional spelling of that name, a former candidate running in the Georgia gubernatorial primary, recently called for the destruction of the guidestones. This created quite a bit of buzz, and a good deal of deserved mockery. Why, then, wasn't the destruction of the monument simply some redneck heeding her call? Two words: predictive programming. (Update: Taylor has credited God with "striking down Satanic Guidestones".)

Aerial views of the Georgia Guidestones: X marks the spot. And, speaking of spots, that appears to be a large blood stain on the capstone of the monument. Can you say "sacrificial altar"?

Second, and this might at first seem like a mundane point, but, viewed from above, the Georgia Guidestones form a giant X, as in "X marks the spot". So what? "X" also denotes the Great Celestial Cross, the "place of crossing", the heavenly location where Galactic Alignment occurs (see last blog or my last two books for further info). As I explained in detail in Black Jack, a super-sized celestial map (As above, so below) and calendar-in-stone is embedded in the layout of our nation's capital, and the White House is located on this map at the precise location of the Celestial Cross.

What does that have to do with the Georgia Guidestones? The Cryptocracy has blown up one of their clocks. The White House is the key element in their other Grand Timepiece. Does the destruction of the guidestones foreshadow a future corresponding calamity set to befall The Peoples' House, perhaps sometime between August 5th and 10th of this year on the first heliacal rising of Sirius? One can envision the cover story now, as the White House is of course one of the top terrorist targets in the entire world.

It is also interesting to note that the Georgia Guidestones and the White House both purportedly lie along the Acadian Ley Line, which, again, purportedly connects to Stonehenge. I don't know for certain if this is true, and you may not put any stock in this sort of thing, but again I'll say, all that matters is what the Cryptocracy says is true. Boom.
